

DOGS

It is better to leave your pet at home...

... because, even when well educated, it represents a real danger for the wild animals. They can get worried only with a simple bark or with its smell. It is specially for this reason that the National Parks prohibit the access to dogs even on a leash.

Tips and introduction to discover the wild world.

Winter

accentuates the wildness of the mountains and sometimes puts aside the humankind. Winter is harsh on the wild life and they have any other choice but to cope with the lack of provisions. Despite their many attempts to fight the cold, the wind and the snow many die during this ruthless season. Even the strongest live and survive on what they amassed during summer where they can lose more than a third of their weight. Winter is a colossal actor of the natural selection. Hence, humans are visitors on a fragile environment. Disturbing the wild life can have a snowball effect and could create a massive impact on their survival. Even more than during the rest of the year, we need to respect their peace and observe them from a distance.

SKI

Enjoy riding down but without perturbing the flora and fauna

please do not touch and damage the plants.

SNOWSHOES

Make your path also means that ...

It is a real responsibility: others will follow and will go even further...

SILENCE

Appreciate Nature as it is and listen to what it has to offer...

Get stuck in time with the feeling that everything has stopped... Winter is quiet and timeless.

BINOCULARS

To observe from a distance without disturbing anyone

Using binoculars

is a perfect way to not interrupt the wild animals and at the same time having the chance to observe them in their natural habitat without being seen.